

'Something underhanded' Langford demands runoff position

By GARY ROSENBERG
Gateway Associate Editor

"Something, I think, is underhanded," said Florene Langford about the ballot counting procedure of the student president/regent election.

Langford sent a letter to the Election Commission Tuesday demanding that a runoff election between herself, Katie Rinn and Mike Smith be held to determine the president, listing several reasons for her belief. A list of 70 signatures accompanied the letter.

Results compiled by the Election Commission showed that Rinn and Smith were the top two vote gatherers in last week's election. Rinn compiled 331 votes, Smith had 214 and Langford received 210. Under Article V, Section Two of the SG-UNO

(student government) Constitution, only the top two candidates would be eligible for a runoff. The Constitution states: "If no candidate receives a simple majority of the votes cast, a runoff between the top two (2) vote getters must be held within thirty (30) days under election rules and procedures contained in the by-laws of the SG-UNO."

Langford's first reason for including herself in the runoff was, according to the letter, because "the vote between Smith and Langford was extremely close." Election Commissioner Kay Gardiner responded by saying that the Constitution "states explicitly" that the top two vote getters will be in a runoff.

Gardiner said if Langford wants to change the ruling of the Constitution she would have to go to the Student Senate. "If she wants to question the integrity of the results, she must go to the student Court," Gardiner said. She said only disputes between candidates are handled by the Election Commission.

Langford's second point stated: "If a box of ballots can be misplaced as was done, this is a sign of incompetence, carelessness, neglect and lack of organization. Thus we can surmise that these inadequacies could have appeared in the election for the President-Regent position; a position far more powerful than a Senator's."

"Nothing was misplaced," Gardiner said, but added, "It depends on what you consider misplaced." Ballots from the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Business Administration were accidentally mixed together, but the error was spotted and corrected, according to Gardiner.

"A reasonable person looking at our procedures would have to conclude that the results are correct," Gardiner said. "We can show that for every ballot we have, a voter voted," Gardiner said. "I can understand her questioning the count, and we can help her out with a recount with Willie Munson (Student Organization Adviser), herself and her agent present," Gardiner said.

"Using their final tabulation, I think all three candidates should be represented (in a runoff election) if student government wants to be fair," Langford said. The "margin of uncertainty" should be considered, she

CBA majors abound at UNO

By DON MEISSNER
Gateway Staff Writer

One out of every five students enrolled this semester at UNO is a business major, according to Larry Trussell.

Trussell, dean of the College of Business Administration, said business majors make up 20.3 percent of the total enrollment.

Gardner Van Dyke, assistant vice chancellor, said enrollment this semester in the college totals 3,013 students, which tops last year's enrollment by 252.

Trussell said the rising enrollment trend is true throughout the country, perhaps because students are getting a lot more information in high schools about career and job markets.

"Business is one of the areas with a strong demand for employment," said Trussell.

He also said that there seems to be a better understanding on the part of the students as to what a business degree really is.

"Say a person is interested in music," said Trussell, "and in order to make a career out of music he thinks he must make that his major. But actually out of the 120 credit hours required for a business degree, only 50 to 70 of those credits are actual business classes making it possible for the student to study other areas."

Trussell said that business is the most liberal of all education, because the students are forced to pursue a broad background. "This gives them the best of both worlds," he said.

When asked if the rise in CBA enrollment may have come from the drop in the number of education majors, Trussell said he was not sure if this was the case.

"There have been a lot of 'lid bills passed," he said, "and this drop in money may have caused a lot of high school teachers who counsel students to guide students into business careers instead of teaching careers because of the job markets available."

Of the total freshmen enrollment of 5,564 students, 1,378 of them are entering as business majors this fall. This means that one out of every four freshmen are entering the college of business.

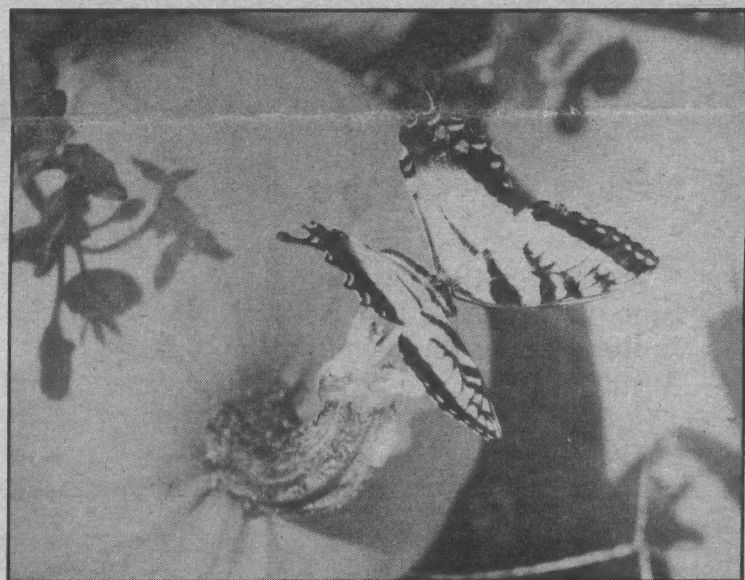

Trussell also said that class size in the college is also increasing. Average class size for 1978 was 34.2 students per class. This compares to this year's average of 37.6.

Trussell said he does not think the budget will allow very many new teachers to be hired. But he said he would like to see the class average drop some.

"Most classrooms in this building (CBA) hold from 36 to 44 students," he said, "and some classes have as many as 60 in them."

Trussell was not sure if this increasing enrollment trend will continue at the pace it has over the last five years, but did say that business will most likely always be the top field in the job market.

Is a liberal arts degree obsolete?

By CHRIS NIGRIN
Gateway Editor

College graduates searching for jobs often hear the same refrain: If you have a degree in business or some technological field, employers will open their doors to you.

For those students with history, political science, psychology, sociology or some other liberal arts degrees, this news is discouraging.

Does a business or technical degree give job-seekers an advantage in the 8 to 5 work world? Are liberal arts degrees more of a hindrance than an advantage in our highly specialized society?

According to John Newton, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at UNO, the answer to these questions is yes — and no.

Newton said: "In the short run, your ability to get a job if you have a technically-oriented degree is enhanced." He cited business as an example.

"Liberal arts degrees are offered for the long-run," so that "what you learn today is applicable tomorrow," Newton said.

"If you are preparing for a highly specialized career, you shouldn't be in the College of Arts and Sciences."

"If you don't have those specific goals, then we'll do a better job, though it may not be apparent in the short-run," he said.

What is learned in a "general, business college program" becomes obsolete, as do many things today, according to Newton. "A broad background in liberal arts does not become obsolete."

Newton quoted Stanley Marcus, retired president of Nieman-Marcus department stores, who spoke at an Academy, Business and Community breakfast several years ago. Newton said that Marcus advised his student audience that if they want to go places to get a liberal arts degree and obtain detailed training on the job or in a master's degree program.

The technical colleges and departments stress and recognize that some liberal arts courses are important for a well rounded background, he said.

"I believe that tomorrow's leaders should not be entirely from specialized areas" but "should be educated broadly."

Newton said he suspects that "proportionately speaking, of all students attending college today," more are vocationally oriented.

He said, however, that he does not believe there has been a drop in the number of students seeking a liberal arts degree.

He said that in the past several years the number of students enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences has gone up slightly or stayed about the same.

Runoff election date set

The runoff election between Student President/Regent candidates Katie Rinn and Mike Smith will be Nov. 15-16, according to Election Commissioner Kay Gardiner.

Gardiner said polls will be set up in CBA and the Student Center in the same areas as in the general election. Polls in CBA will be open 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and again from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. Nov. 15; and 8 a.m. to noon Nov. 16, Gardiner said.

Student Center polling areas will be open 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. Nov. 15; and 8 a.m. to noon Nov. 16.

The runoff is necessary because none of the three candidates in the general election received a 50-percent-plus-one majority of the votes cast as is required by the SG-UNO constitution.

Sold on 'as is' basis

Used Fed cars auctioned

By MICK GAHAN
Gateway Staff Writer

"Seven and a quarter once, seven and a quarter twice . . . sold to bidder number 324 for $725.

With those words, Colonel Gordon England closed another sale of a government surplus car, this one being a 1974 Plymouth Valiant.

The Valiant was one of 78 cars and trucks auctioned off recently at 16th and Leavenworth by the General Services Administration, the purchasing and selling agency of the federal government.

England, the auctioneer for the GSA, said the cars are used by various departments of the federal government and are auctioned off after the motor pool authorities, "determine the cars have too many miles or are too old."

Mileage on the cars ranged from 60,000 to more than 100,000 miles. All the cars were equipped with automatic transmissions, power steering, power brakes and air conditioning. The three pick-up trucks sold lacked air conditioning and power steering.

Under $750

Most of the cars were sold for under $750, although a few went for more than $1,000. The lowest bid accepted was $200 for a 1973 Ford Torino.

England said the government offers no warranty on the vehicles and are sold strictly on an "as is basis."

According to England, "Bidders usually fall into two major categories; used car dealers and parents buying a second car for their children. Other bidders are usually out looking for a good buy."

England sells in a four state area, including Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri. He usually conducts two or three auctions in Omaha annually.

The GSA sells not only cars, but also a variety of government surplus ranging from typewriters to trailbikes. The GSA will even auction off a GMC diesel bus in the near future.

Persons interested in receiving notices of upcoming auctions can be placed on the GSA mailing list by writing: Sales Branch, General Services Administration (6DPS), 1500 East Bannister Road, Kansas City, MO 64131.

The next auction in this vicinity will be at the Old Air Force Base near Lincoln on Thursday, November 8.

Workshops aimed at working women

By KEVIN QUINN
Gateway News Editor

Several local businesswomen will be on hand at UNO next week to take part in a two-part workshop designed to help women in the job market.

The program, titled Shifting Gears: Women in the Job Market, is to "help women who are doing different things with their lives," according to Yvonne Method-Walker, counselor and instructor in the University Division.

"This workshop can benefit women contemplating a career change, moving into the job market from a volunteer status or those without a feel for what they want to do," said Method-Walker.

She said the workshop would involve discussion of what skills are marketable from an employer's point of view, what skills are being sought and an evaluation of the work potential of each individual taking part in the program.

Two two-session programs will be offered, according to Method-Walker.

The first will be held on consecutive Mondays, Nov. 5 and Nov. 12. The second program will take place on consecutive Tuesdays, Nov. 13 and Nov. 20. All sessions will run from 1-3 p.m. in the Eppley Building Lounge.

"The first phase of the two-part program will consist of a panel discussion and presentations from local area employees," said Method-Walker.

"The second part of the program will be a work session to help the individuals in assessing their skills."

Among those local professionals helping with the program are Martha Gibbs of the City Personnel Department and Bobbie Davenport from Northwestern Bell.

"The women we have helping us will share their perspectives on what employees are looking for," said Method-Walker.

The programs are offered at no cost to participants. For more information, contact Method-Walker or Dorothy Graham at 554-2409.

said. Point three in Langford's letter objected to the different sets of figures that Langford said were related to her concerning the election results.

"Those were our figures first and last," Gardiner said, referring to the results listed above. "We never changed. Where those other figures came from I have no idea," Gardiner said.

Langford said that the results, "Rinn-341, Smith-237 and Langford-210," were quoted to her over the telephone Friday evening at around 7 p.m. Gardiner said that all members of the Election Commission left at about 6:50 p.m. Friday evening.

"We can't do anything about the inequity of the vote," Gardiner said. She added that had she lost the election, "I would probably be very bitter."

"We want action taken on this matter by Wednesday, October 31, 1979," Langford's letter read, "and we want to meet, as a body, with the election officials as well as with (Chief Administrative Officer) Mark Magliery and other appropriate persons. Representatives from UMS (United Minority Students), La CAUSA (Chicano Association for United Student Action), AIU (American Indians United), the African Students Organization, and other various organizational representatives."

When asked about the rules governing the runoff, Gardiner said that an amendment to the Constitution might prove wise. She suggested that if the second and third place candidates' counts were within five percent of each other that the third candidate also be included in the runoff. "That would be much more equitable," she said. Gardiner said she thought the present system was better than the former rules, which required only a plurality of votes to be elected as president.

Langford stated, "I know there is going to be a second election between the three of us." She said that despite the Gateway's endorsement of Mike Smith, he "only managed to eke out a four vote margin, hardly sufficient for him to represent the student body in an election against Rinn."

"I have to go ahead as if everything is fine," Gardiner said, "which from my perspective, it is." She said the runoff election between Smith and Rinn is set for Nov. 15 and 16.

After hearing Gardiner's response to the letter of protest, Langford said, "I'm still holding steadfastly to all my accusations; they can be verified with evidence. It's not that we're just screaming without substantiation."

"As far as changing the constitution goes, if we have to, we will," she said.

In another election-related matter, Mike Williams, a member of the Election Commission, resigned Tuesday. Gardiner and Magliery asked for Williams' resignation after he disclosed the outcome of a Senate race to some friends a few minutes before the results were posted.

has not "lost majors, we just haven't gained as rapidly as other fields."

Engineering and technology, however, are fields that are expanding rapidly, according to Harold Davis, associate dean of the College of Engineering and Technology.

Davis said enrollment in the college has been growing for several years.

Total UNO enrollment in the college was 751 in 1974-75; 940 in fall 1975-6; 977 in fall 1976-77; 1,057 students in 1977-78; 1,090 in 1978-79 and 1,135 this semester.

Davis said more students are electing majors in engineering and technology field because of available job opportunities.

Many engineering and technology graduates have as many as five "legitimate job offers."

Davis quoted a College Placement Council salary survey taken July 1979 which said "that of every 10 job offers extended to baccalaureate candidates on the nation's campuses, six go to engineering or technology students. Yet, only 12 percent of college students are enrolled in these fields."

3 buildings open for recess

The library, Campus Security and the Computer Center will be open during part of the holiday recess, according to Rex Engbretson, assistant to the Chancellor for planning.

UNO will be closed Dec. 23 through Jan. 6 to conserve energy.

The library will be open Dec. 26-28 and Jan. 2-4 from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., according to Karen Sampson, assistant to the library director.

Campus Security and the Computer Center, located in the Administration Building, will be open 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The Registrar's office will operate out of the Computer Center to accept grades Dec. 26-27 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Cashiering will distribute University paychecks Dec. 27-28 in the library. All other buildings will be closed. Temperatures in the open buildings will be 65 degrees; and thermostats will be set at 50 degrees in the closed buildings.

Engbretson said special provisions will be made for laboratory test animals and for other similar situations.

Registration will be Jan. 9-11 at the Fieldhouse as planned.

Gideons, UNO student politicians irritating

By JOSEPH BRENNAN
Gateway Contributor
Okay. Before I get to the un-American stuff, I'll make the obligatory reference to the integrity, righteousness, good hygiene, etc. of the mostly middle-age fellows who stood in the chilly weather last week at UNO, handing out free New Testaments. Even if they do wear polyester suits.

They represent the Gideon Society, which is, according to Ralph Crisp, "a nationwide, non-denominational organization of Christian businessmen." Another distributor, Robert Mahoney, was more blunt: "Strictly a Protestant group." Two Catholics wept when I told them.

Harry Thurman, wearing a burgandy blazer with white stitching on the lapel, said that the business of the Gideons is to "distribute the Word of God," nothing more.

"We don't get involved in doctrine," said Thurman, as one of the little green books fell over the ledge in front of the library. Thurman was not perturbed, however. He still had five or six cradled in his arms.

Diffidence and cold hands overcame me, and I excused myself.

As I think about it, at least the Gideon Society isn't as pushy as some of UNO's born-again Christians, a couple of whom told me two years ago that reading Greek philosophy was positively satanic, and that I should sign up immediately for Bible study.

Or take the crusading "Youth With A Mission" who graced our fair city last summer. They were particularly put-out with people who sit in bars after 8 o'clock at night, like myself. YWAM's have no sense of humor, either. To break the solemnity of the discussion, I told one of them, paraphrasing Shaw (poorly I'll admit), that "I can't talk religion to a man with eight beers in my gut." I thought it uproariously funny, but the YWAM just shook his head and promised to pray for my soul.

I am convinced that people who engage in such activities have but one purpose in mind: To annoy me. Yes, the Hare Krishnas, Reverend Doom's Moonies, and groups of that ilk are protected by the First Amendment, blah blah blah. They do not have a constitutional right to be boorish, however, in pursuit of my soul and often, my money. They should take lessons from Old Market winos, many of whom are polite, even literate.

The same day the Gideon Society was handing out half of the Bible, student elections were being held at UNO. Is it really necessary for the campaign hacks of the various candidates to wave leaflets in my face, begging for that one extra vote? There is something very high-

New Student Regent election is called for Views expressed on this page are not necessarily those of the Gateway.

"The worth and correctness of any arrangement, act or idea can be determined by the qualiperson race.

Despite all of the publicity, the election results were as follows: Rinn 331, Smith 214 and Langford 210. At least these were the figures cited by the Election Commission and Willie the four vote difference between Smith and Lanford is not sufficient enough for Smith to represent a portion of the student government in the run-off against Rinn. Therefore, the run-off for this position should consist of all three candidates for they have all shown that they are formidable and capable of handling the position of Student-Regent.

Third, a box of ballots was "discovered" during the tabulation of the votes, and even though this box had no bearing on the student-regent position, it still raises at least two critical questions: 1) if the election commission is so inept that it misplaces boxes of ballots, there is something wrong with that commission, for this is a sign of incompetence, negligence and a profound lack of professionalism and 2) such a lack makes one wonder if these people are capable of a fair count when a position as powerful, prestigious and prolific as Student-Regent comes into the picture.

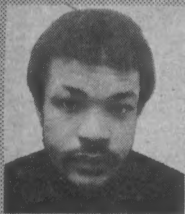

Fourth, there are some irresponsible behind-the-scenes remarks made by one male contestant, supposedly in a joking manner, regarding "burning some of Florene's votes". This type of comment and contemptible behavior is not out of character for those involved in Student Government, as last year's ballot-box stuffing incident exemplifies.

The general student body at UNO should be congratulated for its involvement in making this year's election a very exciting one. At the same time, it should also be aware of the "wee Watergate"-like behavior that is going on behind the scenes. For people to write about student apathy and then attempt to cheat these students when they do come out is not only grandiose, but unforgivable.

Despite all of the buddy-system like behavioral manifestations that marked the 1979-80 elections, Florene Langford performed admirably and therefore in the run-off, we should pay close attention to what some claim are results. If we understand that "families and friendships are all rooted in and reflective of definite sets of rela-

The recently held student elections — particularly those centering around the position of president-regent — unveiled some interesting actions and reactions — some of which I would like to share with you in the following paragraphs.

First, we must discuss the socio-political atmosphere surrounding the three candidates; once this is done, we might see the need and necessity for another election.

A UNO Gateway editorial endorsed Mike Smith; there were also two letters, one from the DiSilvestro faction of the Senate and one from Sigma Tau Gamma, which also backed Smith. Likewise, John Kirk and his clique wrote a letter to the editor endorsing Katie Rinn. Florene Langford was evidently assumed to be out of the race from day one, and therefore, many of us insidiously and incorrectly viewed this as a two-Munson on Monday morning. However the Friday of the vote tallying, a member of the election commission quoted another set of figures to Langford; Rinn 341, Smith 237, Langford 210. This discrepancy shows that something was and continues to be amiss, and the election commission is largely to blame.

Secondly, as we can see, Langford's projected "inexperience" did not prevent her from barely being "defeated" by Smith — who has a past history of student government related service. It is my contention that Civilization 151 will produce at least one scholar this year. He can't miss. After listening to a painstaking description of the development of national monarchies in 14th and 15th century Europe, he raised his hand and said, "Jimmy Carter would be an example of modern-day monarch, wouldn't he?"

These things irritate me. Come to think of it, the Gideon Society made my day. Perhaps a John Paul II T-shirt would cheer me up.

Creighton fells Lady Mavs

By MIKE KOHLER
Gateway Sports Editor

A raucous UNO following failed to spur the Lady Mav volleyball squad to a revenge victory over Creighton Tuesday night as a service breakdown cost UNO dearly in the second game of the match.

"I thought it was a really good match," said UNO coach Janice Kruger, "something the crowd could get really excited about.

But we had a few mental mistakes that cost us."

The most glaring of those was a stretch in the second game of the match, which Creighton won by scores of 15-11 and 15-12. The Lady Mavs failed to deliver on four of five serve attempts while falling behind in the game 9-5.

A crowd of more than 500, with about an even mix of Creighton and UNO fans, was vocal in its enthusiasm for the hard fought matches.

Creighton went out to an early lead in the first game, first by 5-2, then 7-4. UNO staged a strong comeback to take a 10-7 lead, forcing Creighton to call a timeout.

UNO apparently lost the momentum it had built as the Lady Jays came back to tie the score, prompting UNO to call a timeout. Creighton continued its streak and pulled away for the 15-11 win.

As the players prepared to take the floor for the second game, the UNO fans became boisterous, perhaps the reason for UNO's quick jump to a 3-0 lead. Creighton stifled the rush by coming back to tie the score.

Louise Spethman came up with a pair of dazzling spikes to put the Lady Mavs back on top. Creighton followed with a burst that gained them a 7-5 edge. It was at that point in the match that UNO suffered its lapse in serving, falling to a four-point deficit, 9-5.

Then the team of Lady Mavs Maureen Frenking and Spethman took charge of the match and put on an amazing display of setting and spiking. The Lady Mavs roared out to a 12-9 lead before the Lady Jays put the brakes on the drive.

UNO called a timeout when Creighton came within a point of the lead, but the Lady Jays were able to maintain their momentum and win going away, 15-12.

Spethman had 9 kill-spikes in the match to lead the Lady Mavs. She also led UNO to an opening match runaway over Northwest Missouri State, 15-2 and 15-3.

UNO's Thomson, Hall gain NCAA C.C. berths

The UNO cross country team concluded the team portion of the schedule Saturday with an 8th place regional and 5th place conference finish in the meet held at Sioux Falls, S.D.

However, the season continues for Mav runners Jim Hall and Wade Thomson as they qualified for the Division II national meet with 8th and 12th place finishes, respectively.

With ideal weather conditions for the race, Thomson led the field of 93 runners for the first two miles of the 6.2 mile run, with Hall well back in the pack. At that point, the lead was taken by Northern Iowa's Kim Sprain, who went to win easily.

At the four-mile mark, Thomson had dropped back to eighth, while Hall was beginning to move up rapidly. The five-mile point saw Hall and Thomson running together at 11th and 12th. With a half mile to go, Hall made a final surge, passing three runners to snare the eighth spot.

Rounding out the UNO finishers were Chris Stokes, 44th; Mike Jones, 52nd; Craig Dick, 64th; John English, 78th; and Bill Marcheck, 79th.

Both Hall and Thomson carry fine credentials to the national meet to be held at Riverside, Calif., on Nov. 10. For Thomson, it is a road he has run before. He achieved All-American status in 1977, with a 25th place finish at nationals.

Hall has been close in every race he has run, with Saturday's performance proving to be his best run of the year.

With his come-from-behind style and his ability on the hills, he could be a strong contender on any kind of course.

Northern Iowa, South Dakota State, Mankato State, and St. Cloud State were the four teams qualifying for the nationals. Northern Iowa qualified four individuals for the meet.

"Say, Bye," Willie

Only the rarest of circumstances could bring me to say anything favorable about Frank Sinatra, but Ol' Blue Eyes expressed a view shared by many when he advocated the tendering of baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn's resignation.

I swear, I just cannot believe how foolish Kuhn has been in handling the recent Willie Mays case. For some reason, Kuhn thought Willie's public relations job with a New Jersey casino would somehow tarnish the reputation of baseball.

Kuhn's concern for the game's integrity is admirable, but for crying out loud, this is Willie Mays we're talking about here, not Joe Bonanno. Willie Mays, the "Say, Hey" Kid. Known and loved by millions since his rookie year in 1951. A name as big as baseball itself. No way Willie deserves this kind of slur, especially since he has contributed so much to baseball.

When pressed by Howard Cosell during the halftime of Monday night's football game, Kuhn said he had to draw the line somewhere on players' connection with gambling. Yet he tolerates ownership of racehorses by some of the game's respected figures, people involved in both playing and off-the-field operations.

I wonder if such a ruckus would have been caused if the player in question had been Mickey Mantle?

New Lite Beer Commercial Needed: I don't have any logical grounds for defending Billy Martin, I just think he's getting the short end of the stick.

I'll tell you this much: I sure would like to go out partying with old Billy. He likes to get down!

This Week's Picks: Last week, Eddie V split on four picks. Old reliable Nebraska came through and leads off this week's selections. Season's record: 18-7, 72 percent.

This week, Eddie V picks the following to beat the point spread: Nebraska over Missouri, Oklahoma over Oklahoma State, Ohio State over Illinois, Auburn over Florida, Penn St. over Miami (Fla.), and Alabama over Mississippi St.

Over Their Heads?: World-Herald writer Wally Provost this week said the Mavs may be over their heads when they meet North Dakota at Caniglia Field tomorrow.

North Dakota has pulled a couple of games out of the magic hat and doesn't exactly outclass UNO to death. Look for the Mavs to burst the North Dakota bubble.

Revenge Must Have Been Sweet: South Dakota head coach Dave Triplett was a tad bit less than gracious in evaluating his team's win over UNO in Vermillion last week.

In describing Mav quarterback Mike Mancuso, the 1978 All-NCC selection, Triplett said, "Mancuso's not a master. A guy like (South Dakota State's Gary) Maffett scares me more. Mancuso's a tough quarterback, but we contained him today."

Keep Kush Kanned: Apparently there are more than 60,000 morons in Arizona who condone the physical abuse of student-athletes.

A petition has been circulated to urge the reinstatement of deposed head football maniac Frank Kush at Arizona State. Either the televised film reports of typical Kush practices were missed by all the signees, or they approve of Marine drill sergeant tactics.

'Do-or-Die' time for Mavs

By MIKE KOHLER
Gateway Sports Editor

The UNO Mavericks face their toughest test of the season tomorrow afternoon at Al Caniglia Field against the North Central Conference title holders, the North Dakota Fighting Sioux.

The battle with the undefeated and third-ranked Sioux looms as a do-or-die contest for the Mavericks, who have everything to gain depending on tomorrow's results. A loss will eliminate the 6-3 Mavs from any possible consideration for a national playoff berth.

North Dakota clinched its 16th conference title in last week's 37-7 demolishing of Morningside, while the Mavs saw their slim championship hopes go down the drain in a 23-17 loss at South Dakota's DakotaDome.

Last year, the Fighting Sioux provided the only blemish on UNO's record in the first nine games, handing the Mavs a 35-22 setback at Grand Forks after mounting a 21-0 halftime lead.

Mav head coach Sandy Buda does not discount playoff possibilities and said a win over North Dakota could sell the Mavs. "We're playing on pride now," he said after the South Dakota loss. "We can make amends by beating North Dakota this week. As for the playoffs, if we finish 8-3, well, who knows? It depends on what some other teams do."

More than the Mavericks' record was damaged in last week's loss. Junior linebacker Brent Harris, who severely sprained an ankle, and junior nose guard Tom Boyer, who suffered knee cartilage damage, are probably out for the season. Nose guard Duane Williams and defensive back Tim Ward were also injured at the Dome but may be ready for tomorrow's game.

Replacing Harris in the starting lineup will be sophomore Barry Leif, with freshman Rick Poeschl now listed as Leif's backup. Junior Frank Zitnik has switched to nose guard to fill the void created by the injuries to Boyer and Williams.

Junior Matthew Kidd is now co-captain John Small's backup at right defensive tackle, while Chuck Spencer has moved to the No. 2 spot at left cornerback. Lee Queen and Gary Vacha have traded duties at center, with Queen getting the starting nod this week.

The Fighting Sioux offense is led by quarterback-punter Tom Biolo, the team's second leading rusher. Biolo also leads the NCC in punting. Columbus, Nebraska, native Tim Hroza, averaging five yards a carry, heads the North Dakota ground game.

Linebackers Andy Dahlen and Mike Johnson bolster North Dakota's defense. Free safety Mike Voelker was an All-NCC selection last year and leads the team in interceptions.

Linebacker Tom Sutko leads the Mavs' defensive statistical chart with 74 tackles. Leif leads the team in unassisted tackles with 27 and is third in total tackles, one behind Harris. Mike Williams tops the sack pack with tackles totalling 51 yards in losses.

Bobby Bass has racked up 597 yards, an average of 66 yards a game, in heading the rushing chart. Tim Rogers' nine touchdowns give the sophomore the scoring crown so far.

The Mavs will finish their regular season schedule with a home contest next week against St. Cloud State.
